The Truth About Diet

By DR. MORRIS FISHBEIN
Editor, Journal of the American Medical Association, and of Hygiene, the Health Magazine

Some people argue that meat tends to produce constipation. The reason of course is its concentration.

But a meat diet should always be supplemented by adequate amounts of fruits, vegetables, and bulky substances. Such a diet will not produce constipation.

The records of Explorer Stefansson have shown that it is possible to live on an exclusive meat diet successfully and without producing serious changes in the normal body.

Some time ago two Arctic explorers living in New York for a while, an exclusive meat diet for a whole year. It was found that this did not affect their blood pressure.

You should remember, however, that Eskimos, who live largely on meat, eat the various organs as well as the lean muscle meats.

Meat essentially forms a high protein diet. Some people, without cause, fear proteins, which are the building materials of our tissues.

Proteins from all meats, including those from fish and chicken, are about the same type. Chemists do not find any special differences between papers described them. My only criticism is that the book isn't big enough. Too much is left out. But Mr. Green has done a good job of selecting, and what he presents is uniformly interesting.

Your Children

By Oliver Roberts Barton

Sometimes it is necessary to write about the cruel side of children, or what we term cruelty. I don't mean the little devil who pulls wings off flies or squeezes the cat, but the unconscious cruelty of neglect, lack of sympathy and the ready ridicule of weakness.

For instance, there is Mrs. Smith. Mrs. Smith is sick, nervous and worried about money, poor woman. She works hard and simply cannot smile. All day she broods over her troubles and then at four o'clock in comes the brood.

Mary turns on the radio as far as it will go. "Say, Mom," she yells. "What do you think? We are getting up a show at school and I'm to be in it."

Mrs. Smith shudders but manages a wan smile. "That will be nice." "Ted shouts. 'Mello, Mom. I'm going with Dick to see the fire.' He bangs the door, and she hears his bicycle bumping down the steps.

Another Worry for Mother Betty comes out and lisses. "I'm hungry. Aren't there any cookies? Oh, why don't we ever have anything nice to eat? All right, give me an apple." And Betty goes out to play with Jane.

Mrs. Smith sighs. "Not one of them cares how I feel. They don't even look at me."

Mary comes out and says, "I was wondering if you—were you sick again? It seems you're always sick. Mother, I guess I won't bother you about the dress then. It's always the way when I want something."

"I'm sorry, Mary. Yes, I'm sick and tired and worried."

Mrs. Smith adds one more worry now to her list. She forgets the installment man for the minute and broods over the indifference of her family. Cautious, children are cruel, and selfish, she says to herself. How can they be so hearty and noisy and thinking of plays and fires and cookies as though the world wasn't tottering on its legs?

But these children aren't deliberately cruel at all. They are so full of what is important to them that they can't make room for what is important to others, and sighing and crying won't change them.

Putting Family On Notice Once I was low, too, and down in the very cellar of the blues. Things had gone wrong, and I had a headache. Mrs. Smith all over. Then suddenly I got mad.

I called in the youngsters and said, "Look here, I'm sick. I'm sick. I'm sick. And do I care about your jolly good times? No, I don't. Not any more than you care about what I do or feel or worry over."

"From now on it's fifty-fifty. After this, look at me when you come in. Ask me what you can do. Don't say you're sorry I'm sick; I don't want sympathy. I want some decency and a break. These are orders and don't forget it."

They were shocked and contrite. It was their sporting nerve that didn't forget it. If I had sobbed and acted like a baby and said nobody cared for me, it wouldn't have gotten me to first base.

Cruel? No. Kids are kids. But they have to be jerked up by the collar sometimes to realize that there are other people in the world besides themselves.

HELEN HARRIS TODAY TOBY HAN, 19, works behind the jewelry counter of a large Manhattan department store. She has a photograph to be used in a store advertisement and MARY HARRIS, the photographer, tells her she has a "camera face."

Discharged from the store due to the scheming of jealous MAURINE HALL, Toby has difficulty finding another job. Then she meets Mary Hitt and he sends her to HEN BLAKE, manager of a model agency. Toby registers at the agency, secures work as a model.

At a style show where she is modeling, she meets CAROL MARSH, rich and snobbish. She also sees wealthy TIM JAMIESON, who has been trying for some time to persuade her to dine with him. Impetuously she agrees. For a week Tim showers her with attentions.

Toby leaves her rooming house and moves into an apartment with her friend, HARRIET HIGDON.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY CHAPTER XVIII

TOBY didn't want to believe what happened that night at the Seville Club. She argued with herself about it, tried to convince herself there was some explanation.

It had been two days since she had seen Tim. Both days he'd called her and Toby had confidently expected to spend the evenings with him. Then retakes were ordered on some photographs made the day before, and there was nothing for her to do but tell Tim their date was off.

The second evening he had been tied up—some sort of family affair, he said, that he couldn't get out of.

So when he came for her the following evening, a real celebration seemed in order. Toby wore a new hat—shiny black straw with a bright red flower directly in front. She thought it added a good deal of smartness to her simple dress and coat, and was delighted when Tim approved it, too.

"You really like it," she asked eagerly.

"Sure. It's a swell hat. What's that red thing on it?"

"Tim! That's not a 'red thing'; that's a very nice rose."

"Oh, is it? Well, I couldn't tell. Where'd you want to go tonight?"

"You know, it doesn't matter to me." Her eyes, raised to his, glowed as they always did when he was near. "Any place that you like, Tim."

"Well—let's see. How about the Seville Club? Haven't been there for a while."

He had never been there with her. Toby said, her interest quickening. "Yes. Let's go there."

It was not until they had almost reached the place that Toby remembered where she had heard the Seville Club mentioned. It had been Carol Marsh who had spoken of it. Carol had said to her friend, Betty, "I'll ask Tim to take us to the Seville Club."

Well, because Carol Marsh had mentioned the Seville Club was no reason Toby shouldn't go there.

SHE put the other girl out of her mind and began chattering about happenings of the last two days—the retakes, and how she had spent the evening before, pasting up clippings in the scrap-book in which her picture appeared.

Toby had learned that all of the girls who modeled kept scrap-books. And there were the children she'd seen at the Models' League office. Half a dozen brothers and sisters, none over 12 years old, and every one of them a professional model with years of "experience."

"Do you know what Bill Pryor told me?" she asked. "He's the man I worked with in that wash, lag machine advertisement. Bill's wife used to be a model, too. They have a baby now, a little darling—Bill showed me a snapshot of him. The baby's only six weeks old and already he's posed in some pictures. The baby's only six weeks old and he was just grand about it and the agency wants to use him again."

"Tim put up both hands in protest. 'Six weeks old and a working man! Say, that's making it tough for an old codger like me. I always supposed that until a fellow was able to walk and talk he could sort of take it easy.'"

"But the baby loved it. He had a grand time."

"Well, I see what they mean when they say there's no place for old age these days."

They were at the Seville Club now. Outside it looked much like any of the other supper clubs to which Toby had gone with Tim. When they entered, however, she saw that there was more formality here—in the decoration of the rooms, in the way she and Tim were received, in the manner and appearance of the men and women about them. Toby wished Tim had told her. The little black hat with its red rose didn't seem quite the thing here.

Then she remembered that Tim hadn't known they were coming. It had been decided on the spur of the moment. Besides, it must be all right. There was a woman at the left in a gray outfit almost as informal as Toby's. Others, too, here and there about the room.

Toby decided not to think any more about what she was wearing. She was with Tim again, and they had the whole evening before them. Nothing was to spoil her pleasure tonight. She said, looking about her, "This is a nice place, Tim. It's the first time I've been here."

"That so?"

He was always forgetting that all of these places were new to her, that Toby's idea of an evening's celebration, until she had met Tim, had been a cafeteria dinner and a movie.

TIM ordered drinks—an extremely mild one for Toby, which he knew she would barely sip, and a highball for himself. Toby didn't like cocktails. Besides, she knew what they did to a face that must be flawless before the camera.

The dance band was playing now. It was a band famous from coast to coast. Rhythmic melody floated out over the room and diners drifted from their tables to the polished space in the center of the room.

Tim leaned forward. "See that girl over there?" he said. "The one in blue?"

Toby saw the one he meant. "Yes," she said. "She's very beautiful, isn't she?"

"Know who that is?"

"No."

"That's Gilda Lang. She's going to Hollywood to make a picture."

Gilda Lang was an English actress, famous on both sides of the Atlantic. Toby said excitedly, "Really, Tim? Is it really Gilda Lang?"

"Of course it is. And that's Todd Manders with her. I bumped into them last night."

"Last night? I thought you were at home?"

"I was but I—er, I saw them on the street. They say Manders is crazy about Gilda. Well, you can't blame him for that. Looks like a million, doesn't she? Do you remember that last show of hers, year before last?"

"No—I didn't see it."

"Tim knew a great deal about the theater. Toby had been much impressed by all he had told her about actors and actresses and the plays they appeared in. Bits of gossip about this one and that. He knew who were in the new plays, even before they had opened, who suffered the financial loss when a play 'flop'ed. A dozen times he had pointed out celebrities to her—producers, playwrights, song writers as well as actors and dancers and chorus girls. Toby thought it hint of fire beneath the surface. Watching the actress, Toby was startled to hear Tim's voice. He said abruptly, "Listen—I'm fed up with this place. Let's get out of here."

"Why, Tim?"

"It's too crowded and too noisy." He turned, signaling to the waiter to bring the check. "And the service is terrible," he went on. "I never saw anything like it. Come on—let's clear out."

Without knowing quite how it came about, Toby was on her feet, making her way toward the door. She couldn't understand Tim. What had come over him? If he wanted to go somewhere else it was all right, of course. Only this place wasn't crowded or noisy; it was one of the nicest places she had ever been. And Tim had been enjoying himself, too. Why was he suddenly so anxious to leave?

A girl at a table a little distance away caught Toby's eye. There was something familiar about the girl. She turned then, so that her full face came into view and Toby recognized her. It was Carol Marsh—Carol in clinging silver cloth, with a party of half a dozen others.

Toby, where she had been sitting, couldn't see Carol, but Tim could. He must have noticed her—Pain, sharp as it was sudden, latched at Toby's heart. Was this why Tim was in such a hurry to leave?

Hollywood

By Paul Harrison

HOLLYWOOD—Word from Singapore or points east that Charlie Chaplin had married Paulette Goddard would cause little surprise in the film colony.

For almost four years Hollywood has watched while Charlie squired the lovely Paulette to evening parties, tennis matches, polo games, and premieres. As they became more constant social companions, and worked on Chaplin's "Modern Times" together, it became clearer that the wistful little genius was about to take a third wife.

In 1917, when he was nearly 30, Chaplin married 16-year-old Mildred Harris at her mother's home in Los Angeles. But that marriage did not last.

For his second venture he eloped quite secretly to Mexico with Lita Grey. She also was 16. Though there were two fine boys from this marriage, it did not last either.

Then came a period when Chaplin lived to himself or roomed about the world in a restless, unhappy manner, producing little for the screen. Many diagnosed his trouble as "just plain loneliness."

Ziegfeld Beauty It was in the summer of 1932 that he met the slender, platinum-blond Paulette Goddard, whose hair, by the way, has now resumed its natural brown. She was a New York girl who had some chorus experience with Ziegfeld's "Rio Rita" and parts in a play or two.

While awaiting her divorce from Edward James, wealthy southern lumberman, she visited Hollywood. An actor's agent spotted her at a party and procured her a contract with the Hal Roach studios. But then she

LEXINGTON, Ky.—(AP)—Tall, dark and handsome may get the vote of most American girls but, say coeds at the University of Kentucky, "Give us the Jimmy Durante or Joe Penner type every time."

"There is nothing in the world like a good horse laugh," a spokes-woman said in explaining this result of a most Chaplin at a party given by a studio executive. Since then, Paulette and Charlie have been seen together constantly at Hollywood social and sports events.

When Chaplin resumed his long-interrupted producing and acting career to make "Modern Times," he picked Miss Goddard to play the leading feminine role.

Twenty-Two Years Apart The ex-platinum blond will be 25 this summer, while Chaplin will be 47 on April 16. Charlie's liking for women much younger than himself still holds good.

The Chaplin party, which includes Paulette and Mrs. Alva Goddard, her mother, is in the course of a long far eastern cruise. In Honolulu, Manila, Japan, and now at Singapore, the rumor has cropped up that Chaplin and Miss Goddard were to be, or were already, married. Technical legal objections based on Chaplin's former divorce have been advanced, due to the varying laws of the countries visited.

The prospective third Mrs. Chaplin is a good tennis player and enjoys skiing and fishing. She knows and loves the two boys, Charles, Jr., and Sydney, the sons of Lita and Charlie. She is independently wealthy under the terms of her divorce from the well-to-do lumberman who was her first husband.

Near Mary Pickford Should Charlie and Paulette return from the cruise as Mr. and Mrs. Charles Spencer Chaplin, they would probably take up residence at Chaplin's five-acre estate next to Pickford at Beverly Hills.

To become mistress of this 12-room, white stucco house would be an easy role for Miss Goddard after presiding over the extensive Massachusetts estate of her fox-hunting former husband.

Paulette and her mother had been living in a suite in a large hotel nearby during the making of the picture.

Leading Ladies Mildred Harris, the first Mrs. Chaplin, was a star in her own right before she met the comedian. The second Mrs. Chaplin, Lita Grey, was his leading lady in "The Gold Rush." Now comes a third, leading lady in his "Modern Times," marking a distinct Chaplin preference for ladies of his own profession.

Mildred Harris once said that she believed a woman of pulse and understanding, perhaps 30 years old, instead of the young girls both she and Lita Grey were, would have a better chance of making a success of marriage with Chaplin.

Now it would appear that Charlie is taking her advice somewhat to heart.

PONTIAC is the official economy champion of its class—proved so in the famous Yosemite Valley Economy Run*, where, under American Automobile Association supervision, it defeated all entrants in its field—averaging 23.9 miles per gallon (no oil added).

This economy record is all the more phenomenal because Pontiac hasn't skimped on a thing! You get all the weight you must have for safety... the extra length you need for comfort... the finest features money can buy... dependability even greater than that of previous Pontiacs, many of which have delivered over 200,000 trouble-free miles... and the most beautiful thing on wheels. You can put your money in a Pontiac and know you've spent it wisely. On any basis, you simply can't do better.

Anna Hauptmann, wife of the condemned man, had been in communication with the chief executive.

After C. Lloyd Fisher, chief defense attorney, had informed Hauptmann of the adverse ruling of the day, he said Hauptmann had sent a message by him to his wife but would not reveal the nature of it.

At the same time, Prosecuting Attorney Anthony M. Hauck, Jr., of Hunterdon county (Flemington) said Mrs. Hauptmann had suggested to him recently that he talk to her husband, expressing a belief he might talk more readily to him. He replied he would do so, he said, only if Hauptmann had something of real importance to tell, whereupon the matter was not pressed.

Attorney General David T. Wilentz said also that following withdrawal of Samuel Liebowitz, New York criminal attorney, from the case after an extended death house interview with Hauptmann, the prisoner sent word to him by Fisher that the two of them call on Hauptmann. His reply was substantially the same as Hauck's.

Meanwhile, state police and prosecution officials Monday night questioned the son and daughter of Paul H. Wendel, held in the county jail here on a Lindbergh murder charge, who "confessed" the kidnapping and then repudiated it.

The questioning was conducted in the office of Attorney General David T. Wilentz, but the officials would not reveal its nature, or purpose.

Those questioned were Paul Wendel, Jr., and Mrs. Dorothy Phillips, both of whom live here.

the bright idea of turning him into a first baseman. York, who has been out only three years, has played every position in baseball as a professional. He broke in as a third baseman.

Rudy participated in 118 games at first base in the Texas League last season. Competent critics declare he is a better fielder now than Greenberg was when Hank first made a go of it with the Tigers.

Greenberg, compiled an average of .301 for Beaumont, and led the Texas League in runs batted in and home runs. He is faster than Greenberg, if anything, and a splendid throwing arm swings from his right shoulder.

Greenberg or no Greenberg, York will be carried by the Tigers. A husky young man who loves to blast a baseball as does the clouting Cherokee isn't going to be turned back by even a world championship club.

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is another in the series on big league training camps.

By HARRY GRAYSON
Sports Editor, NEA Service

LAKELAND, Fla.—If the Detroit Tigers fail to win their third consecutive American League pennant, it will not be due to lack of incentive in a financial way.

Walter O. Briggs' bonus still goes. Despite the fact that the offer was publicly rescinded when the new Tiger president's attention was called to the fact that it conflicted with rules of organized baseball.

It was announced that Briggs proposed to give the battling Bengals $50,000 if they came down in front again.

As a matter of fact, the extra dividend will total close to $100,000 if the Tigers again grab the gonfalon, for the proposition is 25 per cent of each athlete's salary for finishing in front and 10 per cent for running second.

Now you readily can understand why practically all his teammates are very mad at Henry Greenberg, who appears to consider $25,000 pay. Greenberg demands $50,000, but Cochrane says $25,000 is tops, and Cochrane happens to have the final say.

Greenberg Better Than Fox
With Greenberg on first base and batting in runs and hitting homers, the Tigers consider themselves leap-pipe cinches to beat out the rich Boston Red Sox, the DiMaggio-ized New York Yankees, and the Cleveland Indians.

Offhand, I would say that Hank Greenberg was a bit undecentable in asking for more than $25,000, which is what such an able citizen as James Emory Fox collects from the Red Sox.

At that salary, Greenberg's bonus would be $6250 in the event the Tigers copped the plums. Add to that another $5400, each Detroit player's winning share of the world series last fall, and Greenberg would be recompensed to the extent of $36,650 for playing baseball in 1936. If I were Hank, I'd take a chance.

Walter O. Briggs is revealed as one of the best sports in the game. Head of an automobile body-building concern, he wasn't active in baseball while Frank J. Navin lived, but when the club went to him upon the death of his partner, he hopped right into things with a will.

Gribbs can buy and sell several of the wealthier major league owners. A real fan, he has motored over from his winter home at Miami Beach to watch his team whip itself into condition. Briggs, who suffers from arthritis in his legs, walks with the aid of a cane.

York Ace in Hole
Every time Rudolph York belts out a long hit—and he does it frequently—Cy Perkins and others in the Tiger dugout shout, "Another one like that and Greenberg will be here."

York promises to give Greenberg a fight when the large Bronx Hebrew does check in. One-eighth Cherokee, York is almost as big as Greenberg, and whacks the ball just as far.

Cochrane insists that he is perfectly content to start York at first base. York, a Georgian, first came to the Tigers from Beaumont as a catcher in August, 1934. He appeared to be a fat, lazy kid, and wound up in Beaumont a year ago, when somebody got

Racing Extension Violation of Law

Court Agrees With Bailey—But Doubtful If There's Time to Act

LITTLE ROCK.—The State Racing Commission is violating the law in permitting the Oaklawn Jockey club to continue horse races this week but Pulaski chancery court has no authority to interfere, Chancellor Dodge held Monday in dismissing for want of jurisdiction the suit of Attorney General Carl E. Bailey against the commission for an injunction to prevent further races.

"As I see it, the attorney general has a perfect lawsuit," the chancellor remarked, "but I do not think this court can order the commission to revoke a license which it has already issued and under which races already are being run."

"If an injunction proceeding is proper, I believe it should be brought in Garland chancery court, and I do not think there can be any question as to the interpretation which any court would put upon the law. It states plainly that horse races shall not be run more than 60 days in any calendar year and that no club or other organization may be granted a license to have races for more than 60 days in any six months of the calendar year. Attorney General Bailey said that he had already considered filing suit in Garland county but had concluded that it would be impossible to obtain a ruling there before the races had been run under the questioned permit, and that the issue before the court thereby would become "moot."

Mr. Bailey, evidently pleased that the chancellor's interpretation of the racing law, Act 46 of 1935, coincided with his own, said that he had not decided whether he would take further action.

STORIES IN STAMPS
 By I. S. Klein

GOD OF THE GODS

LOOKING down from his throne on Mt. Olympus, Zeus, god of the gods, noticed young Phrygia, son of Tros, hunting in the woods. The great thunder-burbling god needed a cup-bearer and thought how suitable Phrygia would be for the task. So, converting his body into that of a huge eagle, Zeus swooped down to earth, picked up Phrygia in his talons and bore him back to Olympus. This episode in the life of Zeus is pictured on the 25 drachmae value of Greece's new issue of mythological stamps.

Zeus had power to transform himself into any form that he desired. Once, in the shape of a bull, he carried off Europa, and often, in other forms, he brought to the peak of Olympus new amours who excited the jealousy of his wife, Hera. When she defied him, once, he suspended her in the clouds.

For there was no doubting the authority of this god. He punished severely all who rebelled, as he did Prometheus by condemning him to 10,000 years of torture on the rocks of the Caucasus, for stealing fire from Olympus.

Nevada Soil Tour Begins Saturday

Agent J. L. Hiler Announces Series of Farmers' Meetings

Nevada County Agent J. L. Hiler, has been called to Little Rock Wednesday and Thursday of this week to attend a conference of county agents on the new soil conservation program. Mr. Hiler will return to Prescott Friday ready to discuss the details of the new farm program. A series of farmers' meetings will be held in Nevada county to acquaint growers with the program, beginning with a meeting at Prescott April 4 at 10 o'clock.

The complete schedule of meetings for the county follows:

Saturday, April 4, 10 a. m., Prescott, Missouri and Boughton townships.

Monday, April 6, 1 p. m., Union Church, Parker township; 3 p. m., Bodew, Parker township; 7:30 p. m., Willisville, Taylor township.

Tuesday, April 7, 8 a. m., Laneburg, Albany township; 1 p. m., Sutton, Albany township; 4 p. m., Caney Church, Georgia township; 7:30 p. m., Bluff City, Union township.

Wednesday, April 8, 1 p. m., Liberty, Redland township; 3 p. m., New Hope, Redland township; 7:30 p. m., Emmet, Emmet township.

Thursday, April 9, 2 p. m., Rosston, Caney township; 4:30 p. m., Glenville, Leake township.

Friday, April 10, 2 p. m., Cale; 4 p. m., Carolina Church, Jackson township.

Saturday, April 11, 9 a. m., Falcon, Alabama township.

"I hope," said Mr. Hiler, "that everyone seeing this printed schedule will tell his neighbors, so that everyone will have an opportunity to hear the discussions. It is hoped every farmer will attend one of the community meetings, thereby having an opportunity of getting his personal questions answered."

This Time Oakie Meant It

Every time Jack Oakie, famous film comedian, whispered words into the ears of a blushing blond, rumor of a new romance spread through Hollywood, and each time the report faded with age. Now, however, Jack's latest whisper has been taken up by Venita Varden, movie contract player, and the two left Hollywood for New York, to be wed on their way to Yuma, Ariz. The couple is shown here just before they left Los Angeles on their projected wedding trip.

College Glee Club Here on April 6

Wheaton Singers to Appear at Methodist Church Next Monday

Violin solo, vocal solos, and quartette numbers will feature the program of sacred music which the Wheaton College Men's Glee Club will render Monday night April 6 at the First Methodist church.

This club, now on its fifth annual spring tour, has planned an itinerary that will take the singers as far south as Dallas, Texas, and to such interesting cities as St. Louis, Kansas City, Tulsa, Oklahoma City, Little Rock, Memphis, and Indianapolis.

The leader, H. William Nordin, who has been director of this musical organization since 1930, is well-known in musical circles, especially in Chicago, for his able choral directing, and much of the success which the Wheaton singers have achieved is attributed to him.

An unusual amount of special talent promises to make this season one of the most outstanding in the history of the club.

Chief among the talented is Maurice Dobbins who will play a solo, "Hejre Kati" by Hubay and will also accompany the glee club in "Meditation (Ave Maria)" by Bach-Gounod. He has played with the Chicago Civic Orchestra for three years, and is popular among Wheaton students as a soloist for special campus functions. Mr. Dobbins also sings second tenor in the glee club quartette. He has the rare gift of perfect pitch and because of this ability sets the pitch without the aid of any instrument for each selection given by the club.

Edward Crum is the chorus pianist. He has won honor as a musician by being awarded special distinction in 1928 by the Federation of Music Clubs of Washington, D. C. He is active in radio broadcasting and is known on the Wheaton campus as a brilliant organist. Mr. Crum has had previous experience with the Providence Bible Institute.

Hjalmer Berg is one of the best tenor soloists of the organization and is concluding his fourth year with the club. He is in great demand especially for gospel singing and is a member of the College Quintet which travels on evangelistic work in the interest of the college. He is also a radio artist, both in Chicago and in his home city, Miami, Florida.

The quartette members are all singers of ability and their voices blend in perfect harmony. They are: Hjalmer Berg of Miami, Florida, first tenor; Maurice Dobbins of Wheaton, Illinois, second tenor; Jack Constock of Cleveland, Ohio, baritone; and Norman B. Harrison, Jr., of Minneapolis, Minnesota, bass.

The program that has been planned is entirely sacred except for a few secular numbers which are included in the repertoire to be sung as occasion demands. Mr. Nordin has himself arranged several of the numbers, and has composed the "Choral Benediction" which concludes the program.

Story of Kidnaping

en. Next day two more were agreed upon. The jury consisted of four women and eight men charged with hearing both sides of the case and deciding whether that expressionless German carpenter had committed the almost incredible crime of which he was accused.

The jury heard 162 witnesses testify in the old-fashioned Hunterdon county courthouse—109 for the state, 53 for the defense.

David T. Wilentz, sharp-featured attorney general of New Jersey, called upon camera and microscope, fact and circumstance to weld the chain that would pull Bruno Hauptmann to the electric chair.

Curious Throats
Doggedly, shrewdly, vociferously Edward J. Reilly fought back in defense of the pallid man who sat between two blue-coated state troopers and registered complete lack of emotion.

Outside curious jammed the sidewalks, straining for a glimpse of the famous persons inside. Some brought little lanterns and pinched them to their overcoat lapels as souvenirs, momentary of a gala occasion.

Anne Morrow Lindbergh was the first to testify of the circumstances surrounding the disappearance of her son. Lindbergh soon followed. There was the poignant story of the night of March 1, when their baby was stolen from his crib in the Lindbergh home on a lonely hilltop in the Sourland mountains near Hopewell, N. J. Softly, Mrs. Lindbergh spoke as she touched the little sleeping garment used in perpetrating the $50,000 ransom hoax.

"I put it on my son," she said.

Lindbergh's Testimony
Lindbergh, stern but retaining some of the boyishness of his first days in the American spotlight, told of the night he went to the Bronx cemetery with "Jafie" and heard a voice from the shadows call "Hey, doctor!"

He said the voice was Hauptmann's. (Later, the defense in taking exception to the jury's verdict claimed the twelve jurors were influenced against Hauptmann by the presence of Lindbergh in the courtroom.)

Betty Gow, the kidnaped baby's nurse, came back from Scotland to testify. The defense questioned her almost viciously, bringing out that she told Henry "Red" Johnson, her sister, that the Lindberghs would stay with the baby at Hopewell the night of March 1. She denied indignantly that she had "planted" the baby's thumbguard in the roadway of the estate, where it was picked up a month later.

Jafie Testifies
Then "Jafie" went to the stand, told his tale of the ghostly tryst at St. Raymond's with "John."

"John" is Bruno Richard Hauptmann, cried the old schoolmaster.

Eight handwriting experts, led by Albert S. Osborn of New York, swore that Hauptmann wrote all of the 14 ransom notes, beginning with the one left on the window sill of the baby's nursery.

Others testified they had seen Hauptmann near the Lindbergh home, seen him with a ladder, carried notes for him, observed him "spying" on Jafie.

But it was the kidnap ladder, left broken under the nursery window that seemed to fasten itself most irrefutably to Hauptmann. Arthur J. Koehler, government wood expert, told of 18 months spent in tracing that ladder—how he traced the wood to a lumber yard where Hauptmann once worked, matched a nail of the ladder with a missing board in the floor of Hauptmann's attic, demonstrated with Hauptmann's own plan to show it left grooves like ones in the ladder.

For the Defense

The state rested its case on January 24. Hauptmann was the first to testify in his own defense, and through hours of savage questioning he maintained his innocence; that he was in a Bronx bakery with his wife on the night of the kidnaping; that he was at home "making moose" on the night the ransom was paid; and—

That Isidor Fisch, his little furrier partner who died in Germany, gave him a shoe box containing the ransom money.

Hints of a Gang
Isidor Fisch was not the only "witness" conjured from the grave to bolster Hauptmann's story or to shift the odor of guilt. Violet Sharpe, Morrow housemaid who committed suicide during the kidnap investigation, also played her part in the trial. One witness after another was brought forth to substantiate stories of the defense which threw guilt toward Fisch and Violet Sharpe.

Handwriting experts swore Hauptmann did not write the ransom notes; a wood expert swore the wood in the kidnap ladder did not match Hauptmann's attic.

The state based its case on the theory of a one-man job; the defense hinted broadly at a gang—with "inside" connections.

Testimony ended on February 9. Anthony M. Hauck, Hunterdon county prosecutor, summed up the state's case and Reilly the defense's case.

Guilt?

Justice Trenchard charged the jury on February 13, and at 11:23 a. m. the deliberation began. That night the bell tolled in the courthouse belfry . . . the jurors filed in for their last momentous appearance . . . and they returned a verdict of "guilty," without a recommendation for mercy.

Bruno Richard Hauptmann was sentenced to die in the electric chair in the week of March 18.

In the death house at Trenton he smiled for photographers.

Notice of appeal was filed. Defense attorneys went to chancery court, and the appeal was automatically thrown into the court of errors and appeals.

That body heard both sides on June 20 and began its study.

Mrs. Hauptmann tried to raise funds for further defense, groundwork having been laid for an appeal to the U. S. supreme court. Reilly sued for $22,398 but his case was dismissed. Hauptmann saw four men walk past his cell to the electric chair . . . he told them to "pray to God" . . . he gained 10 pounds, took to reading the Bible . . . remained the check-proof Bruno Richard Hauptmann who handled a machine gun in the World War.

Russians Bombard Japanese by Air

New Clash in Outer Mongolia Revives Threat of Oriental War

TOKYO, Japan.—(Havas).—An attack on a Japanese border detachment by Outer Mongolian battle planes, reported in dispatches from Manchukuo, sharpened fears here Tuesday morning that the multiplying frontier clashes may start a major war on the Asiatic mainland.

The dispatches, based on a Japanese Kwantung army headquarters communiqué, said one Japanese soldier was killed and four wounded when Mongol planes bombed a Japanese detachment patrolling territory 50 miles southwest of Lake Borno, western Manchukuo. The planes raked the Japanese with machine gun fire, it was added.

Two Soviet ships, seeking shelter in the forbidden zone of Tsuruga bay from a threatened storm, loomed as another potential cause of grave friction between the two powers. Japanese authorities announced they would confiscate the ships, the Suchoan and the freighter Dvina, deport the passengers and prosecute the captains.

"G" Men Prepare to Abandon House

Reports Are Still Conflicting Over Outcome of Hot Springs Raid

HOT SPRINGS, Ark.—(AP)—Department of Justice agents who raided a cottage near here Monday in a reportedly unsuccessful quest of Alvin Karpis, No. 1 public enemy, arranged with the owners of the house Tuesday to pay for the property damaged in the raid, and prepared to vacate the cottage.

A large squad remained at the house Monday night and Tuesday morning, taking fingerprints from the walls and furniture and personal effects found at the place, meanwhile maintaining complete silence.

Hot Springs police and Kansas state police who were in Hot Springs during the raid, expressed the view that it was unsuccessful, but persons living near the house still believed that three persons were taken into custody.

Each puff less acid
A LIGHT SMOKE
OF RICH, RIPE-BODIED TOBACCO

The simple mechanical details of cigarette manufacture are of surprising importance. Upon them depend the physical properties of the cigarette, such as weight, size, firmness, moisture-holding properties, uniformity of fill, uniformity of product—all of which have a far-reaching effect on the character of its combustion and the constituents of its smoke.

In the manufacture of Lucky Strike Cigarettes all of these properties have been standardized with care for the perfection of A LIGHT SMOKE.
